The natural law, to conclude, is the insistence that everything in exchange, polity, and life stands under the test of a reason grounded in what is. Thus, it is a guarantee that a free market not only has its proper place but it itself, when it does what it should do, is a place where natural reasoning works itself out.

Natural Law and Economics. Three notions of Natural Law ; Natural Laws are statements concerning regularities in the world Natural Laws are the 'principles' which govern the natural phenomena of the world (laws of Nature) Natural Law ethical theory that moral standards that govern human behavior are objectively derived from nature of human beings
